Culling of Herds Means Selling of Poorest, Not Best

Constructive Livestock Breeding Is a Lifetime Occupation

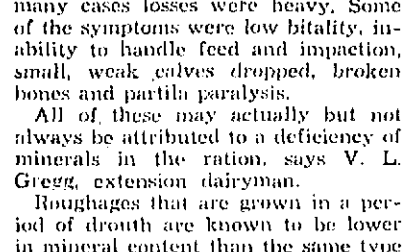

OPPORTUNITY NOW

Drouth and Feed Scarcity Causes Producers to Improve Herds

Farmers should make every effort to protect the quality of their herds and flocks when drouth conditions make culling necessary. W. R. Harbinger, head of the department of animal industry, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture declares, "The farmer who is forced to sell a part of his livestock on account of the drouth is often tempted to sell his fattest animals and those which are the best individuals because they will bring the highest price on the market. The farmer who does this will find that he has done away in a short time with whatever progress he may have made in breeding up his herd or flock during the past several years. Constructive livestock breeding is a lifetime occupation. The man who disposes of his best animals whenever adverse conditions arise cannot hope for success. The best herds have few enough tops and too many tailenders. On the other hand, Mr. Harbinger points out, forced culling during the drouth may be very profitable if it is done from the bottom up. Intelligent elimination of the poorest animals is a wise practice at all times. Whenever culling is practiced, it should be from the bottom instead of from the top. Furthermore, when prices are low, the spread on the market is not great, the poorer animals nearer to the tops than when prices are high. Minerals Needed. Serious cattle losses common in drouth years may be avoided through the use of mineral mixtures. Farmers in the drouth area in 1934 experienced much trouble in their cattle, both beef and dairy, and in many cases losses were heavy. Some of the symptoms were low vitality, inability to handle feed and impaction, small, weak calves dropped, broken bones and partial paralysis. All of these may actually but not always be attributed to a deficiency of minerals in the ration, says V. L. Greig, extension dairyman. Roughages that are grown in a period of drouth are known to be lower in mineral content than the same type of roughage grown in normal years. Calcium phosphorus and chlorine are the essential minerals that are deficient. These may be easily and economically supplied by making available to cattle at all times a mixture of two parts granulated stock salt and one part steamed bone meal. This mixture should be placed in a box that is protected from the weather and the cattle should have access to it at will. The small cost of these minerals

Football Practice to Begin Tuesday; Opening Game 11th

Season and Box Seat Tickets Go on Sale Monday Morning

ASHDOWN IS FIRST KILL 100 CHICKENS

Team Candidates Will Report to High School at 3 p. m. Monday

With the first football game less than two weeks away, Coach Foy Hammons issued a call Saturday for all prospects for this year's team to meet him at 3 p. m. Monday at the high school building. Equipment will be issued and the first practice session will start Tuesday afternoon. The Bobcats open the season here the night of September 11 against Ashdown High School. Season tickets will go on sale Monday morning at Hope Confectionery. Adult season tickets will sell for $3, student tickets at 50 cents and box seats at $5. Coach Hammons said that he has had many requests for box seats. Preference will be given to persons holding box seats last year. Tickets will be held for them one day only. After Monday box seats will be available to any person wishing to buy them, the coach said. He explained that several loyal supporters of the Bobcats had held box seats three consecutive years, and expressed the view that they should be given preference over the choice of seats.

Alton's 200 Men Celebrate Their Camp Anniversary

Half-Holiday Wednesday Devoted to Baseball Game and Banquet

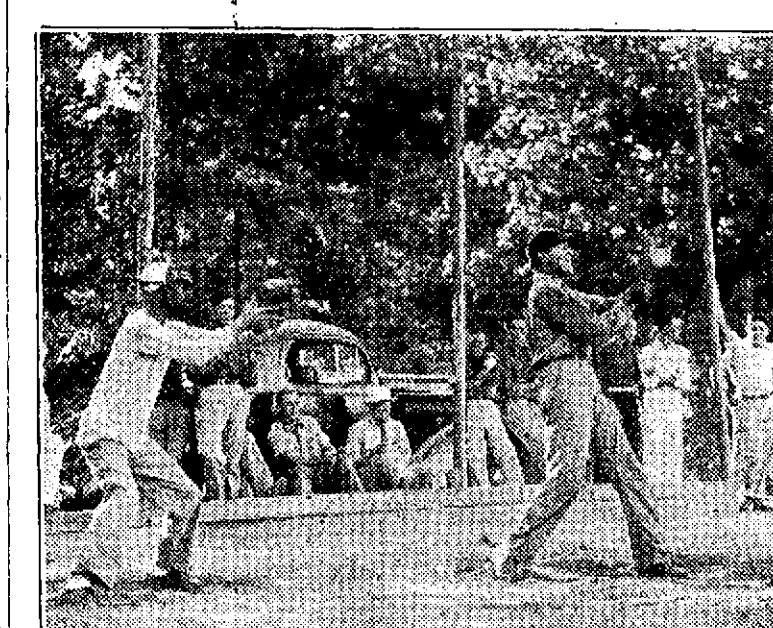

MARKS FIRST FULL YEAR OF CCC ENCAMPMENT 6 MILES SOUTH OF HOPE

Hope's CCC camp at Alton, six miles on the Lewisville highway, celebrated the first anniversary of its founding, Wednesday, August 26, with a half-holiday of outdoor sports in the afternoon climaxed by a chicken dinner at night. Relatives and friends of the camp boys gathered on the grounds during the afternoon to see a baseball game between the CCC team and the Hope Lumberjacks—the camp team winning 4 to 2. Invited Guests. A delegation of invited guests from Hope dined in the officers' quarters simultaneously with the main dinner in the mess hall. The official guest of the camp was Captain Thomas Dyer, sub-district chaplain, with headquarters at Hot Springs. During the dinner it developed that the 100 chickens whose drumsticks and wish-bones furnished a sumptuous feast for the 200 members of the camp came originally from Chaplain Dyer. Through him the camp had obtained 500 baby chicks, and all these months the boys had been raising them for just such an emergency as the anniversary dinner. One hundred of the flock had their necks wrung Tuesday afternoon, were picked Tuesday night, and appeared on the table Wednesday night—all of which was duly photographed, as may be observed in the adjoining columns of this page. Organized Aug. 26, 1935. Alton camp was organized August 26, 1935, since which time 275 Arkansas recruits have been enrolled. The camp is in command of Lieutenant John C. Meador, other officers being Lieutenants R. E. Evans and E. P. Ervin. The Soil Erosion Service project superintendent is R. C. Ellen. The present strength of the camp is 196 men, three officers and 11 project foremen.

CENTER—They killed 100 chickens for that dinner. This picture, taken at 6:30 the night before, shows the boys preparing to pick the chickens. Smoke from the fire-pit in the center drifts across the scene. BOTTOM—The batter swings and misses! This picture by The Star's lightning-fast press camera catches a fast moment in the baseball game between the CCC camp team and the Hope Lumberjacks, which the camp team won by 4 to 2. In the photo the player's bat is in mid-swing, its end pointed straight at the camera, and therefore invisible. The camera has "stopped" the ball, which is plainly visible—that white spot three inches above the bat.

Georgia Guard Is Slain by Fugitives

Third Escape Attempt of Convict Results in Prison Slaying

ATLANTA, Ga.—(AP)—Clyde Gresham, 35, chain gang guard, was shot to death Saturday in the escape of two young convicts from the road crew. Police Clerk George Jackson said the convicts were Theron Cranston, 22, who escaped twice previously while serving 20 years for a street car hold-up, and Charles Brown, 19, given two to five years for a motor theft. When woodpeckers in southwestern states bore holes in cactus, the wound seals itself with a hard, fiber lining, which is removed by native Indians and used like a cup or glass to hold water and other liquids.

Minnow Eats Up Mosquito Larvae

American Discovery Helps Italy and Other Nations Clean Up Pest

By SIGRID ARNE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Minnows like nothing better than a good meal of wiggle-tails. And thereby hangs a tale of international good will that should make the state department jealous. Wiggle-tails are adolescent mosquitoes: just after they leave the eggs and just before they sprout wings. So obviously, everywhere a minnow stops for lunch he saves human beings that many bites, and maybe, that many cases of malaria and yellow fever. On a good day a minnow can consume a hundred wiggle-tails. He goes

German Minister Arrives in Italy

May Foreshadow Mussolini's Visit to Hitler—and a Fascist Pact

VENICE, Italy.—(AP)—Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister, arrived here by airplane Saturday and was welcomed by Dino Alfieri, Italian minister for press and propaganda. Goebbels' arrival led to the belief that a united Nazi-Fascist front will be built up against Communist propaganda. There was no confirmation of a Berlin report that Mussolini would visit Hitler in Germany in September.

Promoter Slugged, and Riot Follows

Wild Scene Occurs During Wrestling Show at Walnut Street Arena

Wild scenes that bordered on mob action occurred at the South Walnut street wrestling show Friday night when more than a dozen angry spectators swarmed into the ring upon Bill Jeffries, Oklahoma mauler, who had turned on Bert Mauldin, referee, kicking him through the ropes. Fortunately, no one was seriously injured. It occurred like this: Mauldin was kneeling upon Pat Newman of Texarkana, who had been knocked to the floor by Jeffries by a series of foul blows. Suddenly Jeffries rushed from his corner, booting Mauldin through the ropes. Mauldin landed on his head, came up to find the ring crowded with angry spectators who had formed a circle around Jeffries. Whether any of the spectators slugged Jeffries, Mauldin was unable to say. He was inclined to believe that Jeffries had been hit one or more times. The balance of the spectators who had remained in their seats were unable to see just what took place. Before Mauldin could quell the disturbance and clear the ring, Newman, who had been flat on the canvas, rose and pounced upon Jeffries. This caused the dozen or more men and boys to step outside the ring. A socking contest developed and Jeffries, after receiving a shower of blows to the head from the fists of Newman, sank to the floor. Exhausted and dizzy, Jeffries was helped to his dressing room for the rest period. When the two grapplers came back for the second fall, Jeffries pleaded with the spectators to keep out of the ring, declaring that "Newman is as big as I am and we both can take care of ourselves." Jeffries again turned meanie, forcing Newman to retaliate with flying fists to protect himself. With a series of punches to the heart and head, Jeffries dropped to the floor and was counted out. Again he was helped to his dressing room. The opening match between Jack Curtis, substituting for Frankie Hill, and Ivan Micheloff, was no mild affair. Curtis won over his opponent with two straight falls. During the tussle, Referee Mauldin was hurled back against the ropes by

Jumps 86 Floors to Horrible Death

Young Newspaper Man Commits Suicide From Empire State Building

NEW YORK.—(AP)—With a smiling farewell, "so long, folks," Robert Francis Erskine, a young newspaper reporter, pushed himself from the parapet on the 86th floor of the Empire State building Friday and hurtled to his death on the sidewalk 1,050 feet below. Erskine, 23, a reporter for the Bronxville (N. Y.) Press, shot past three setbacks and smashed at the rate of about four miles a minute into the sidewalk on West 34th street. Half a dozen sightseers on the observation tower floor saw him wave a newspaper, clamber over the ledge, and spin out into space. Building engineers estimated he traversed the distance, equal to the length of a 15-car railroad passenger train, in eight and one-tenth seconds. A photographer had asked the youth, member of a party being guided about the tower, whether he wanted his picture taken. Erskine nodded in assent and moved back to the parapet. He thrust one leg over it and sat there a moment. He looked down. "So long, folks," he said, and cap-

Is the First Air Attack to Reach Heart of the City

Several Persons Wounded, and Government Buildings Are Damaged

DICTATORSHIP SEEN

Rebels Will Import King, However, Only If People Vote for Him

MADRID, Spain.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Fascist rebel aerial bombs exploded Saturday in downtown Madrid for the first time. Several persons were wounded, hundreds of windows broken, and important government buildings were damaged. The attack was the fourth of the week but the first successful onslaught against the city itself. It was followed by a fifth venture by the rebels which was frustrated by quick-acting Madrid Socialist government airplanes.

BURGOS, Spain.—Fascist rebel leaders said Friday night that if their forces win, Spain will have first a military dictatorship similar to those in Italy and Germany, and then the people desire their former king, Alfonso, will return to the throne. But before the monarchy can be restored, there must be a dictatorship with the close co-operation of Germany and Italy, the Fascist leaders said. They declared that Italy and Germany are "friendly nations" which have stood by the rebels. The rebel leaders said that a military dictatorship must be set up "indefinitely" to "exterminate" the Socialist government elements and to rule the country "without any parliament." Once this military dictatorship is established, the rebel leaders continued, they will hold a popular vote to decide whether Alfonso should be restored to the throne. Alfonso, who fled the country in 1931, has given to public indication that he sought restoration, but reports have said he was considering returning to Spain. His aides declined comment at Innsbruck, Austria, where he is staying, but it was said a plane was being held in readiness for him. His son and heir presumptive is Prince Juan of the Asturias who some weeks ago was reported to have returned to Spain for a conference with the rebel leaders in Burgos. He was escorted back across the French border.

Ohio Crime Bureau Is Second to U. S.

At London, Ohio, There Are Records of 2 Million Criminals

LONDON, Ohio.—(AP)—Aided by its "secret 21," by the largest state file of fingerprints in the United States and by masks of wanted men, Ohio's bureau of criminal identification and investigation carries on a continuous scientific battle against the underworld. Its record of 2,000,000 criminals ranks second to the files of J. Edgar Hoover's "G-men" at the federal bureau of investigation. And although the Ohio bureau has only three "O-men," it has an invaluable source of information of lawbreakers in the "secret 21." Organized two years ago as the Ohio crime control commission, the "secret 21" is made up of representatives of various law enforcing agencies. But identities of the individuals never are disclosed. Bureau Chief Howard G. Robinson, who has been in crime detection work 16 years, moreover, has developed the use of moulage in the identification work of the bureau and is regarded as an expert in its use. Moulage is used to mould life-like figures of body features of criminals—face masks, hands and the like—and to preserve imprints, such as footprints and tire marks. "Moulage," says Robinson, "offers another wall for the criminal to scale in his losing battle against law and order." The Ohio bureau of criminal identification and investigation, established in 1923, has its offices at the state prison farm near here. Bureau Chief Robinson is assisted by E. J. Yantis and L. Hollingsworth.

Orange-Yellow Is Asked for Signs

Optometrists Say That This Combination Can Be Seen Twice as Far

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—The Northwest Arkansas Optometric association adopted a resolution here Friday urging orange-yellow as a background for Arkansas highway signs, at its annual district convention. It also urged the color be adopted for stripes down the center and edges of the highway. Dr. William A. The optometrists are seeking to have Arkansas schools adopt orange-yellow crayon for blackboard work.

YOUR HEALTH

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

The skin of the face ordinarily is adapted, by years of exposure to sunlight, fresh air and the elements, to get along quite satisfactorily merely with simple cleaning.

It is customary to wash the face two or three times a day either with water alone or with soap and water. In fact, the face may be washed much oftener if one wishes to do so.

In some instances, however, the skin may be sensitive to soaps and react with irritation. In other instances it may be unnaturally dry, so that too frequent washing will result in chapping of the skin.

Anyone with ordinary intelligence can tell for himself whether the skin of his face is being damaged by ordinary washing either with water or with soap and water.

Probably the best method is to wash the face freely with plain water during the day, and then to give it a thorough washing with warm water and soap before going to bed at night. After the face has been washed or bathed with warm or hot water, it is good for the skin to apply cool or cold water immediately after.

When the skin of the face is unusually greasy or dirty, it may be helped in many cases by steaming or by covering it with hot towels. In case the skin of the face is not especially greasy, it may be kept soft simply by an occasional massage with cold cream.

Modern cosmetic agencies are inclined to emphasize the use of cold creams of various types and of various consistencies. Application of any cream to the face should usually be preceded by a thorough washing with warm water and soap.

Creams should not be applied so often as to keep the face greasy. In most cases application of a cream once a week is sufficient.

For a skin that is especially dry, use of a toilet powder aids in prevention of damage. Daily use of creams with powder on top will incline, however, to clog the pores of the skin and may in the long run damage it.

Nowadays, there is a great tendency to expose the skin not only of the face, but of the rest of the body, to tanning by the sun. Most specialists are convinced that excessive exposure to the sun will damage the texture of the skin, making it coarser and darker, and, perhaps in older people, setting up processes of change which in the long run are quite harmful.

This does not mean that we should avoid outdoor exposure of the skin to reasonable amounts of sun. It does mean that severe tanning and overexposure to the sun will damage the skin, and in the long run injure the complexion.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Life summer is the time when the thoughts of mothers everywhere are harrowed by misgivings of sickness. There is always the dread of infantile paralysis, for instance, that chooses fall days to ride its witch's broom. And diphtheria, scarlet fever, and the so-called children's diseases, like to ride high, too. Whatever she thinks of summer heat, the average mother wishes in many ways that it would go on forever, if it means immunity to her family.

"I should like to say, 'The best way is not to think about it at all.' Perhaps I will say it anyway, because I am almost superstitious enough to believe that useless worry invites trouble.

However, I don't class precaution with worry, so it may be well to review a few things together.

Keep Hands Away From Face

Since infantile paralysis is still a mystery as to source, it is hard to say where to look for trouble. But this is known. The germs enter through the nose and attack the nerves of the nasal passages and the head. This in itself is a valuable bit of information, since prevention can be used in a measure.

Frequent washing of hands these days is a good idea, and especially if children dig outdoors much, or play on the ground. Washing before meals is always good, but just now better still. If a child has a habit of putting hands to face, or mouth or nose, he should be utterly discouraged in the practice. Handkerchiefs should be tucked in small pockets and used exclusively by their owners.

If one lives in a district where the water supply is under suspicion, it is wise to boil it before using. This applies to many diseases. Typhoid, of course, is the villain to beware of most alertly, where water is concerned. Better too early than too late, and that parent who is not sure, can at least sleep better if he knows she has taken the right precaution.

Good Health Is Best Defense

As for contagious diseases, I know of no better time than late summer or fall to keep the neighborly sniffer away. Or to keep our own small coughers or sneezers at home. Or to segregate the member of the family who "does not feel so well." Oh, yes, the chances are that it is just a cold, or a little sore throat; it is foolish to cry "wolf" for every small indisposition and think the very worst. However, even the child who has nothing more than a common cold should be banished from society. It may go easy with him but hard for the next fellow.

Diseases are more contagious in their early stages, almost invariably, indeed, before diagnosed as dangerous, or innocent, as the case may be. But the child with a headache, a fever, sore throat, stiff-neck, bad cough, extreme weariness, pain in the stomach, pain in legs or continued nausea, needs a doctor. I have mixed up symptoms of a number of things purposely. But they are storm signals and should be heeded.

Don't let children get over-tired. Keep them out of night draughts. Change clothes with the thermometer. Keep up their general health, known as "defense." Defense either throws off disease or fights it well if it comes.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

Hollywood's crop of "gypsy" children, whose tender years are punctuated by shuttle trips between the homes of their divorced or separated parents, is growing.

This year has produced a larger than usual group of these children who, either by court decree or by mutual agreement of the principals, may enjoy only one parent at a time or may have to share parents with other relatives.

The fate of most of these youngsters is the incidental product of marriage which did not last, marriages which bogged down because love and a career did not mix or because temperaments clashed.

Battle Lasting Years

Years of legal tussles were required to smooth the dispute over custody of little Jane Bannister, daughter of Ann Harding and Harry Bannister, both Hollywood figures.

Married 10 years ago, the couple were divorced in Reno in 1932. After long controversy, in which each charged the other was not a fit parent, Jane was given into full care of her mother, with the father getting the privilege of her company four week-ends every three months.

But Jane's shuttle schedule was due for revisions. A trip to Europe with her mother turned into a time-table marathon as Bannister made a sensational, unsuccessful plane dash to prevent their sailing.

While the process of settling Jane Bannister's home life "serenely" went its way, from across the ocean came warnings of another child custody case in Hollywood.

Determined Mrs. Llewellyn Bartholomew, mother of Freddie Bartholomew, young English starlet imported by Hollywood, announced that sympathizers who had read her story of his life had contributed funds to send her to America to regain possession of him.

Share Freddie's Earnings

Lined against Mother Bartholomew was Freddie's aunt, Miss Mylicent Mary Bartholomew, his guardian in California, who was credited with training and guiding him to a $1000 a week salary and stardom.

After attorneys and principals thrashed it out, it was agreed that Freddie's aunt would remain as his manager while his parents were to move from England, set up house-keeping in Hollywood, and share Freddie's pay checks.

Paralleling the Bartholomew case is that of Edith Fellows, who at 9 had completed the cycle of America's "rags to riches" tradition.

When Edith's parents separated shortly after her birth, the girl was lost in the shuffle. She lived with her grandmother, whom she came to regard as her real mother. Edith, talented and ingenious, broke into the movies as an extra, and finally won a long-term contract.

Then a suit was filed by Mrs. Harriet Fellows, claiming Edith as her daughter and asking custody on the ground that the grandmother, who had letters of guardianship, was not competent to raise the child properly.

But the disposition of the case may be guided by the fact that little Edith herself said in court that she had no love for her mother.

"Trial Marriage" Involved

Whether a mother may keep her two little children while she lives with a man to whom she is not married was the question in settling the custody of Teddy and Lori Von Eltz.

Their father, Theodore Von Eltz, matinee idol, was divorced by his wife, Peggy Prior, who under exclusive care of the children. Then Von Eltz learned that his ex-wife was planning to marry Joseph Moncure March, with whom court records show, Peggy already was living in a "trial marriage."

This convinced Von Eltz that his children needed a change of environment. He started proceedings which resulted in an order that the children be placed in a neutral home, the parents having joint custody.

Later, after Peggy formally married March, Von Eltz agreed to let the children remain permanently with their mother.

For parents, too, separation from their children may be tragic. Lina Busquette, dark-eyed stage and film beauty, took poison after brooding over failure to get custody of her daughter, whose father was the late Sam Warner producer.

Harry Warner, Sam's brother, had been appointed guardian of the child, and Lina believed persons in the movie industry were trying to turn the child away from her. This, she said, led to the unsuccessful "suicide" attempt.

Mary Hay and Richard Barthelmess continued the fight over their daughter even after both parents were remarried. The mother claimed Barthelmess was keeping the child more than his allotted six months each year. The dispute was settled at a conference in which the late Rev. S. Parkes Cadman was arbiter.

Chaplin Share Sons

Best known of the Hollywood children figuring in family differences are the two sons of Charlie Chaplin and Lita Grey Chaplin. When Charlie and Lita were divorced in 1927 she was awarded custody of the boys.

For some time they lived almost entirely with their mother, but Chaplin himself took an interest in them after his successful fight to keep them out of the movies.

Now the boys divide their time between father and mother, apparently quite happy. They are on friendly terms with Faulette Goddard, to whom Chaplin is said to be engaged or married.

Less fortunate is Marylyn Thorpe, 4, daughter of Actress Mary Astor and Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, a movie colony physician, whose squabble over Marylyn's custody dates back to the time of the divorce in April, 1935.

At that time Miss Astor was forced to surrender the child to Thorpe. Her subsequent suit to gain custody of Marylyn then brought the bitter court duel in which father and mother sought to prove each unfit to rear the child.

Child Ignorant of Plight

Thorpe contended his ex-wife's "lavender diary," in which she kept the record of her private life and her acquaintance with other men, was evidence of her unfitness. An agreement giving Miss Astor part time custody of the child prevented the diary being made public.

"She doesn't know what it's about," said the judge in the case, after visiting little Marylyn to see what she thought of her parents.

The judge might have been speaking of any one of the kids caught up in the family debates which brew intermittently in Hollywood.

Next Term Will Be No Party For President

Editorial By BRUCE CATTON... Cartoon By HERBLOCK

No matter who wins the coming election, a lonely and frequently very tired man is going to be occupying the White House during the next four years. The prospects are so dark it is a wonder any man would want the job.

For the country is in the midst of a period of considerable stress, and the focal point of this stress will rest squarely in the middle of the executive mansion. Consider, for a moment, what the occupant will be up against.

He will be forced to decide whether the United States is going to swing to the right or to the left during the next four years. Whoever the winner is, the pressure on him will be tremendous; and if he tries to hew a straight middle course it will be greater than ever, for each side will accuse him of going in the wrong direction.

He will have to direct the foreign policy of the most powerful nation in the world at a time when—unless all observers are mistaken—the world will be in greater danger of stumbling into war than at any time since 1918.

X X X

HE will be faced with the titanic task of erecting defenses against the drouth and erosion that have become so dangerous to our future as an agricultural nation. In some ways this will be one of his greatest tasks, since it involves nothing less than preserving the physical assets of the land from incalculable natural forces.

He will be held responsible, rightly or wrongly, for the maintenance of American prosperity in a world which is following selfish and blind nationalistic policies that lead away from prosperity. There will not be a great deal that he will be able to do about this, and he will have the comfort of knowing that, no matter what course he follows, he will meet with determined opposition.

It is the same way with unemployment. Here, again, the president should not be held wholly responsible, or even chiefly responsible, for the growth or diminution of that terrible problem. But his fellow citizens will blame him, just the same. It may be a well-nigh impossible task, but he will have to find a solution.

X X X

MOST important of all, he will have to furnish the people of America with a moral and emotional rallying point. The people are tired and confused, and they have been that way for years. They want desperately to be drawn together, to be persuaded that there is a way they can follow, and to be led along that way.

One of these days they may do some very distressing things if that conviction and that leadership are not given them. It is going to be up to the president to meet that demand.

It is hard to think of any man on earth on whom more will depend than the President of the United States in the next four years.

The campaign is beginning to speed up, and hard things will be said about both candidates for the next couple of months. Before we get too emotional, we might stop to give the winner, whoever he is—Roosevelt or Landon—our deepest sympathy.

Can Poultry Culls

The logical place for culls from the poultry flock is in containers on the pantry shelf. This is especially true right now when feed is scarce and expensive.

Canning chicken is an easy job if a few simple rules are observed. Instructions for the process are given by Mrs. Ruby Mendenhall Smith, extension economist in food preservation, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

A steam pressure cooker must be used for safe sterilization. Put chickens in the coop for 24 hours before they are killed, giving them plenty of water but no feed.

It is better to dress the birds the day before canning if there is a cool safe place to store them. They should be killed and dressed at least 6 hours before, being sure they are well bled and thoroughly cooled.

Remove all large bones and pre-cook as desired. Add seasoning and pack hot into sterilized containers. Fill glass jars with boiling hot gravy or broth. Fill tin cans to within 1/2 inch of the tops, wipe off shoulder of jars, adjust rubber rings and covers and partially seal. Completely seal tin cans, place containers in the pressure cooker at once and process pint jars 70 minutes, quart jars 75 minutes. No. 2 tin cans 85 minutes and No. 3 tin cans 70 minutes at 15 pounds pressure.

When canning in glass, allow the pressure cooker to cool to zero, open the petcock, remove the cover and lift out the jars and completely seal. When tin cans are used, slowly release the pressure, remove the cover, lift out the cans and plunge them at once into cold water and stop the cooking.

Set aside to cool completely before storing.

No Nutrition Loss

There is very little loss of nutritive value in canning meats, and the canned product is as nourishing as freshly cooked meats, according to Gertrude E. Conant, Extension Nutritionist.

The nutritive value of all lean meats lies in their protein and mineral content which does not vary much with the source. Lean beef, mutton, pork, and chicken are very similar in composition, with the exception that pork has more fat incorporated with the lean.

Every ounce of canned meat is a source of valuable body building material, with its protein, iron, and other necessary minerals. Canned lean meat is also a source of vitamin G, the anti-pellagra vitamin.

Another good source of protein is fish, either fresh, canned, or pickled. The proportion of protein in fish is very similar to that of lean meat.

Salt water fish are extremely valuable for their iodine content. Iodine is an element which is often lacking in the soils of interior states, and when the soil lacks iodine, the vegetables grown on that soil are also lacking, Miss Conant explained.

Late Fall Vegetables

The first signs of a shower will bring Hempstead county farm women out into the garden to plant late fall vegetables. Some garden crops will come up and start growing in warm weather and then mature after the weather has turned cold.

To begin with the old stand-by, turnips, will do to plant at this time and will give considerable root growth before cold weather, providing fall rains are received. Siberian kale will make an abundance of growth before cold weather and will even stand considerable snow without injury. Even rape will do for "greens" and will withstand considerable unfavorable weather. The crows and pigs will enjoy rape also. Beans may be planted until 6 weeks before frost.

The seed should be soaked in water over night to make them germinate quickly and start growing at once, Claude Wesley, extension horticulturist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, suggests.

Turnips Valuable

Turnips proved their worth as a drouth emergency food crop in 1930 to Arkansas farm women who planted hundreds of acres to the crop. The virtues of turnips from the standpoint of nourishment are explained by Gertrude E. Conant, extension nutritionist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

The root turnip contains about six per cent of sugar and starch. The raw turnip is a good source of vitamin C. The cooked turnip has a fair supply of vitamins A, B, and C.

Turnip greens are of more value as a protective food than is the root. The

Cards Drop Their 6th Straight Game

Suffer Second Consecutive Shutout at Hands of Lowly Phillies

ST. LOUIS — (AP) — The Cardinals dropped to third place Friday as the last place Phillies blanked them, 8 to 0, the sixth consecutive setback and the second straight shut-out for the Cardinals.

Bucky Walters held the once mighty sluggers of Frankie Frisch to six hits. Henry (Cotton) Pippin, rookie pitcher marking his first start since hustled up from Sacramento, was effective until the sixth when five hits drove in two runs. Chuck Klein's seventh inning homer won the game for the Phillies.

But Leo Norris' fourth inning double, scoring Dolph Camilli, was all that was needed for victory.

Earl Grace, Phillie catcher, was purposely passed four times. His third time up, after two walks, he doubled, putting Norris in position to score Philadelphia's second run.

greens are particularly rich in vitamin A, B, and G. Vitamin G is the so-called anti-pellagra vitamin and hence a good supply of turnip greens protects against that dreaded deficiency disease, Miss Conant points out. Turnip greens are also very rich in calcium and iron. The former helps build teeth and bones, the latter is necessary for building red blood cells.

The turnip root and tops constitute an extremely valuable protective food and are also valuable for body building.

The world stand out on either side. No wider than the heart is wide. Above the world is stretched the sky. No higher than the soul is high. The heart can push the sea and land farther away on either hand. The soul can split the sky in two. And let the face of God shine through. —Selected.

Cherishing the vain hope that the impressions once recorded in this column have been missed while the writer enjoyed (?) and unusually hot summer, and gave the readers of this paper plenty of time to peruse that splendid Centennial Edition of the Hope Star, which will go down in the annals of newspaper history as a most wonderful achievement, and I shall never cease to congratulate myself that I was invited to add my bit. This is not a belated compliment to the Star Boss, but the more we read the Centennial Edition the more it dawns on us how very valuable it will be to those who come after. . . . I wonder how many of our readers know the late William Jennings Bryan's "Water Trust"? . . . "Water—the daily need of every living thing. It rises from the earth and descends to the summons of the sun, and descends in showers of blessings. It gives of its beauty to the fragrant flowers. It is the alchemy that transmutates base clay into which the finger of the Infinite traces the radiant bow of promise. It is the drink that cheers and brings no sorrow with it. Jehovah looked upon it at Creation's dawn and said "It is good." We commend it to the W. C. T. U. as a super-argument. . . . From my window I can see a Japanese bush filled with lovely red blossoms, mixed with green apples and a few green leaves that have survived the intense heat of the summer. . . . And speaking of arguments, in looking at this beautiful picture, that only deepens our faith in Him who speaks to us through these beautiful flowers in these long hot days. . . . Questions that have been brought up and discussed among friends on our front porch these summer evenings. . . . Is there, or isn't there a law against opening up the muffer or cut-out of a car while going down or up the city streets? Or a law against blowing the horn, or those abominable double horns at all hours of the night, while passing up or down the streets? Is it right to jeopardize the life of citizens by allowing the use of double trailers? If you will take the trouble to notice, two regularly make a number of trips up and down Main street during the day and some time far into the night. Their swaying from side to side is rather bewildering to the driver who is trying to race as many as three cars down the street, and the pedestrian who is not careful enough to get far enough into the curb to avoid being struck by one of these swaying animals. All of the above was brought about in trying to carry on conversation on one's front porch these hot evenings, not only on Hope's favorite race track but almost anywhere in the city; it is even worse than that constant ringing of bells, the "Tooner-ville Trolley" seems to think necessary as soon as they hit the suburbs of our city.—If you think this "fussing and prying" just please remember it is the sentiment of the majority of Hope's citizens. To make a pleasant ending to this jumble of words and thoughts, we want to thank the City Fathers for the traffic light on Main and Third, it will certainly be a pleasure to go down town now, with out an attack of "jitters" in crossing the above mentioned streets. . . . Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Hyman have returned from their honeymoon trip where they visited points of interest in the West, and are spending a few days visit with Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Park at McKamie. . . . The Executive Board of the Woman's Missionary Union of the First Baptist church will meet at 4 o'clock, Monday afternoon at the church. . . . Mrs. T. J. Logan, Miss Ina Logan, Mrs. T. H. Seymour and daughter, Elcaner and Mrs. Otis Park have returned to their home in Fulton after a motor trip through the Yellowstone park and other points of interest in the West. . . . Mrs. Cecil Weaver and son, John Cecil have returned from a week's visit with friends in Camden. . . . Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Yates who have spent the summer in Winchester, Ky., are expected to arrive in the city, Tuesday, September 1. . . . As a special compliment to their house guest, Jack Blakely of Hugo and Miss Kathleen Stone of McGehee, guests of Miss Mary Wilson; Mr. and Mrs. Terrell Cornelius entertained on Friday evening at their home on South Pine street. The beautiful lawn of the Cornelius home was brilliantly lighted and arranged with chairs and tables for different games and contests. In Progressive Bill, the prize went to Miss Nancy Hill and E. P. Young Jr. Miss Florence Davis won the favor in the contest, and the honorees were presented with gifts. A delightful ice course was served. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stuart of South Main street have as house guest, Miss Polly Yauger of Foreman. . . . Vincent Edgar Keith of Texarkana is the guest of his grand parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Coup and other relatives. . . . Miss Ruth Coffman has returned from a week's visit with relatives and friends in Idabel and Broken Bow, Okla. . . . Mrs. T. L. Park of McKamie, Miss Edith Mitchell of Buckner and Mrs. Otis Park of Fulton and Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Hyman of Arkadelphia were Thursday guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Cornelius. . . . "Brother's Wife" New Saenger Film

Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck, Jean Hersholt in the Cast

There is good strong screen fare on the bill at the Saenger Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, with all the ingredients that combine for popularity. "His Brother's Wife," brings Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor to the screen in a spectacular romance. That alone is of striking significance. Jean Hersholt of "The Country Doctor" fame, is featured as a veteran explorer and adventurer in the far and dangerous places in the far and dangerous places of the tropical jungle. Joseph Calleia scores in another of his suave bad-man roles. Van Dyke's tradition is superb. Of late, none could have molded this material so artfully as Van Dyke, with his knowledge of the jungle from personal experience and likewise his familiarity with human emotions. The daring story of a young scientist who ventures into the jungle to find the cure for a dreaded malarial and returns to the realization that the woman he loves is his brother's wife, provides a dramatic vehicle for these distinguished stars. The latest news and a Patsy Kelly comedy completes an unusually fine program.

after them something like a spaghetti-devotee goes after spaghetti: "Slo-o-o-p!" and another wiggle-tail wiggles no more. . . . Thus the minnow is a joy to public health departments. He is "planted" in shallow, sluggish waters over which mosquitoes buzz on summer nights. . . . Not all minnows are useful. Some are vegetarians, and pass up wiggle-tails. It's only the "Gambusia" specie, from southeastern states, that is sure death to the mosquito. He revealed his eating habits to Dr. S. F. Hildebrand, of the federal Bureau of fisheries, way back in 1924, when Dr. Hildebrand was stationed at Beaufort, N. C. . . . Dr. Hildebrand kept minnows in a tank of water. He spread some of the slimy-like colonies of eggs which mosquitoes deposit on the surface of the water. When the eggs burst they turned into creatures that look like tiny sections of a watch-chain with a whisker-like fuzz at one end. That's a wiggle-tail. . . . It hangs head-down from the surface of the water, breathing through its tail. Then up darts a minnow from the water below. "Slo-o-o-p!" and a whole flock of wiggle-tails are gone. . . . The news about these Gambusia was bruited about when the World was brought about when the ponds asked to clean up mosquito ponds around large army camps in this country. He did. . . . Italy Was Jubilant . . . Slowly, the information spread. Italy wrote for help, and four years later expressed jubilant praise of the minnow. Since then he's been "introduced" to Portugal, Palestine, the Philippines, Mexico, Puerto Rico and Argentina. . . . Dr. Hildebrand sends off tanks of the fish and gains because they probably arrive doubled in number. A female minnow gives birth to as many as 200 young at once. And she repeats five to six times each summer. . . . There is one drawback. Gambusia doesn't like cold climates. He has managed to struggle through the winter in southern Illinois and Indiana, but that was in ponds fed by warm springs. Now Dr. Hildebrand is looking for a northern fish that also has a tooth for wiggle-tails.

HOPE GOSPEL TABERNACLE
Bert Webb, Pastor
A new all time record attendance of 288 in Sunday School meeting and a full house both morning and evening made last Sunday one of the greatest days we have seen at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle. There were people who answered the altar call for salvation at both of the services. Visit us Sunday and if you have not been attending any Sunday School regularly you will no doubt wish to become a member of the Tabernacle Sunday school. . . . The revival campaign that was to have begun next Sunday has been postponed for a short time but will be held in the near future. . . . "Satan's Occupation, What Does It Do?" will be the subject for the evening service at which time the pastor will deliver the sermon. You are urged to plan to attend this service. Rev. The Empire State building, 103 stories high, a total of 1,250 feet, was opened to the public May 1, 1931. It was built at an estimated cost of $31,000,000 with 85 of its floors set aside for offices. The 46th floor is an observatory. From it rises the tower atop which is a dirigible mooring mast. . . . Suicide leaps have been more frequent from the George Washington bridge, largest bridge in the world, which spans the Hudson river to connect New Jersey and New York. Since its opening in October, 1931, 39 men and women have jumped or fallen to their deaths from the bridge.

Rev. Couch Revival to Close Sunday

"The Sin That God Will Not Forgive" to Be His Closing Theme

"The Sin That God Will Not Forgive" is the topic of the final sermon to be preached Sunday night by the Rev. Bill Couch who is bringing his revival campaign to a close at Fifth and Elm streets. . . . He will preach Sunday morning at the First Baptist church. Subject of his sermon is Heaven. . . . After leaving Hope the Rev. Mr. Couch will go to Lewisville, Ky., where he will attend the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

Negro Revival Meeting to Begin Here Monday

A revival meeting will begin Monday night at Bethel A. M. E. negro church. The Rev. W. D. Davis of Oklahoma will conduct the campaign. He is the son of the Rev. E. F. Davis, pastor of the church. Culling of Herds may mean a big saving in cattle losses, low vitality and weak spring calves following a drought season such as a part of Arkansas is experiencing this year. . . . Fall Oats . . . Wherever there is a shortage of feed, as large an acreage as possible should be planted to oats this fall. States C. K. McClelland, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. . . . In the northern part of the state, Lee, Curtis, Culberson, and Turf strains are satisfactory to plant, but in the cotton belt proper where oats are subject to attacks of crown rust, redroot proof strains such as Ferguson, Appleton, Norflex and 100-bushel should be grown if it is the intention to grow the oats to maturity. There is a scarcity of seed of these winter oat varieties and the seed will likely be higher in price than the seed of spring oats. . . . For those who need additional pasturage, spring oats may be used to cover some acreage in addition to the acreage planted in winter oats. The spring oats will furnish an abundant fall and winter pasture and should they be killed will have paid their way. However, if the winter is mild, they will grow and produce hay and seed nearly equal in value to that produced by the more hardy strains. Spring varieties such as Fulghum, Kherson, Burt, Columbia, or whatever variety is available may be used for this emergency pasture. . . . If fall conditions approach normal and if the oats are planted reasonably early an abundance of fall grazing will be obtained. While fall oats may be planted as late as September 20 in the northern part of the state in October 15 in the southern part, there is no reason why earlier planting can not be made and the amount of fall pasturage secured will no doubt be greater if the oats are planted in early September. . . . Seeds for Fall Planting . . . In an attempt to overcome the effects of feed shortage in the drought counties and to extend the regular fall and winter crops program, a list of available sources of seeds for fall planting has been prepared by J. H. Heckman, extension economist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. . . . This list includes both winter legumes, such as hairy vetch and Austrian winter grass, and such fall grains as rye, oats, wheat, and barley. It also includes seeds for the fall and winter garden. Sources and quotations for both car lot and L. C. L. shipments are included. . . . This list is available at the office of W. E. Mountcastle, county agent, and vocational agriculture instructors in the county. Individual farmers wishing to order supplies of these seeds or groups of farmers wishing to make co-operative orders can get these sources and prices from Mr. Mountcastle, or their nearest vocational agriculture instructor. . . . Water Supply . . . Hempstead county farmers are urged to examine closely the water supply in pastures because in hot weather livestock need extra amounts for body comfort by W. E. Mountcastle, county agent. . . . Animals going to the brook or waterhole during a dry period may or may not get enough to satisfy their thirst. If an abundance of pure water from wells and springs is not available at all times, the general thrift, vigor and well-being of the animals will be adversely affected. When hungry animals have to struggle for water in a dry pasture, profitable production declines rapidly.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JUDITH JORDAN has been engaged to STEPHEN FOWLER for four years. She was to be married and keep her job in business office but Steve will not hear of this. . . . Judith meets Steve for lunch and they go over the familiar arguments. Judith points out that their friends, VIRGINIA and BOB, are happily married, though both have been engaged to each other for years. Judith threatens to break the engagement. . . . Judith confides in Virginia about Virginia and Bob promise to drop in to see Judith that evening. . . . Steve arrives first. His mood is tender and affectionate and Judith finds it hard to keep to her decision. . . . NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER III

Judith turned. "There's no need of your running away, Steve," she said.

AT the sound of Virginia's voice, Judith and Steve sprang apart. . . . "Damn!" said Steve in a low voice. "She'd naturally choose this time to come popping in here. I'll skip along, Judith. I can see you tomorrow." . . . Judith turned in the hallway. "There's no need for your running away, Steve. Please stay a little while." . . . Stephen stayed, finding it impossible to do anything else. Into the little apartment, as if on the crest of a typhoon, came Bob and Virginia Bent—with Tony Lynch. "Hel-lo, Steve!" exclaimed Toby, extending his hand. Without enthusiasm Steve shook hands with him, returning his greeting with an unenthusiastic, "How are you, Toby?" . . . The two were as unlike as possible. Steve Fowler was tall and solid and thoughtful. Toby was small, almost rotund, and apparently had never possessed a continuous train of thought in his life. Yet, mysteriously and unaccountably, he managed to get along in the world quite as well as Steve. . . . Virginia shot a glance toward Judith. "You and Steve didn't plan on going out, did you? We thought we'd just drop in for a five-cupped chat. That thing Bob is holding behind him isn't his hat. It's a bottle of cocktails." . . . "And what cocktails?" mentioned Toby. "The Bent Special!" . . . With an effort Judith tried to project herself into a lighter mood. She held out her hand for Bob's container of cocktails. "I'll chill them in the refrigerator a while. . . . There are cigarettes on the little table there." . . . Steve followed her into the kitchen. "What's the idea of encouraging them to stay?" he whispered. "You know I wanted to talk to you." . . . Not looking at him, she opened the refrigerator door and set the bottle of cocktails against the icy pipes. "I can't send them away," she said quietly. "And I think everything was clear, wasn't it, even before they came?" . . . "You mean we're finished?" "I mean we're friends. And that's all." . . . Steve was about to speak when Toby's raucous voice carried into the kitchen. "If you two don't get away from that refrigerator those cocktails will have no chance at all to chill!" . . . RESIGNEDLY, Steve returned with Judith to the other room. He looked at Toby, his eyes clouded with ill concealed contempt. He had never cared much for Lynch, and he liked him even less

now. More than once he had suggested to Judith that she should have nothing to do with him. . . . "But he's perfectly harmless," Judith always defended. "And he's a good friend of Virginia's and Bob's—so what can we do?" . . . Steve had said nothing to Judith about the story that was drifting around. It was one of those stories which a man will hide from the women of his acquaintance, no matter what he thinks of the protagonist of the story. Toby Lynch was supposed to have persuaded a girl to share his apartment with him in lieu of marriage. Part of the story was that they were very much in love, and unable to marry—but this failed to condone the matter in Steve Fowler's mind. He had never seen Toby Lynch in the company of a young woman, and this lent credence to the story rather than not. . . . The conversation, chilled a little by Steve's silence and Judith's obvious preoccupation, went rather badly. Finally, in desperation, Bob went to the kitchen and brought out his cocktails. They warmed the loquacious Toby into a running fire of comment, and succeeded in mellowing the Bents. But Steve drank little, and Judith always limited herself to one cocktail. . . . Yet Virginia made no move to leave, and Judith realized that she intended to keep herself and Toby and Bob there until Steve Fowler had departed. Plainly Virginia wasn't going to leave Judith alone with him again. . . . At length she set down her glass and got up. Steve looked relieved—but he was to suffer disappointment. "Judith," she said, "let's you and I go over to my pride," Steve told him. "I've never believed a married woman should work—not when there are thousands of single girls looking for jobs and not finding them." . . . "That's a specious argument," Bob put in. "Oh, I'll grant that there are some married women working in offices—married women who could get along on their husband's salary. But mostly they're women who are so well trained that their job couldn't really be filled by the average single girl looking for a job. Let's take Virginia and myself as an example. Suppose I hadn't married her? She'd be working at her job, just as she is now. So what difference does it make to the unemployment situation whether we're married or unmarried?" No, Steve. . . . I think you're trying to work up a logical, economic argument to justify your pride." . . . Steve smiled slowly. "Maybe so." . . . "WELL," put in Toby, twisting impatiently in his chair, "I'd even go one step further than Bob." . . . "What do you mean?" asked Steve, raising his head. . . . "Bob and Virginia took a big chance when they married." . . . "With due respect to Bob, I can't see that they did," Steve argued. "Both have jobs. Either job would probably support the two of them. If they were careful and willing to make sacrifices, I can't see that they took any chance at all." . . . "You're wrong Steve," said Toby, rising and walking toward the box of cigarettes on the little table. Carefully he took one up, lit it. "Look here. It's a well known fact about human nature that people want what they can't have. Suppose Bob and Virginia had wanted to marry only because it looked as if they couldn't? Then discovered afterward they'd made the wrong move. That would have been bad, wouldn't it?" . . . "I'm afraid I'm not following you very well," Steve said. . . . "There's only one sensible solution to the problem of two people in love who can't marry for economic reasons," Toby Lynch went on. "They should simply share an apartment together, split all the expenses. Then when business returns to normal, when all the salary cuts are restored and the birds start singing in the trees, these two can look at each other and decide whether they should really marry." . . . "It's a nice idea for the man," Steve said quietly. "But what happens to the girl? I know it's a very modern world—but most people still think a lot of the marriage rite." . . . Toby snorted. "You'd be surprised at the number of such young couples right in this town today. And as for the girl—any woman who's really in love is willing to make the sacrifice. I tell you, Steve, it's the only way. You won't lose any of your real friends, and the others don't matter. That's the thing for you and Judith."

Michaeloff. Excited spectators started for the ring, but W. C. Page rushed in to save the situation. . . . Page put a headlock on Michaeloff and slammed him into the mat. Michaeloff looked up at Page crazily but did nothing. Professional grapplers coming to Hope remember that Page at one time held the middleweight boxing championship of the Southern Conference. . . . Stamp News

By I. S. Klein

THE twin marble pylons at Vimy Ridge, France, commemorating the sacrifice of Canadian troops there during the World War, are reproduced on a new set of two stamps France just has issued. The stamps appeared in connection with the unveiling of the monument recently by King Edward VIII.

Instead of selling its remaining potato tax stamps to the highest bidder, as first planned, the U. S. Treasury Department may decide on another way of disposing of these stamps. Protest of collectors caused the department to change its mind.

Faster airmail service has been inaugurated between the United States and South America, resulting in a saving of two days from Miami to Rio de Janeiro. At the same time, the Postoffice Department has announced weekly round trip schedules on the trans-Pacific airmail route, from San Francisco to Manila.

There is little probability that the trans-Pacific route will be extended beyond Manila this year.

Members of the American Creative League of Music Students have sent a petition to the U. S. Postoffice Department, asking for a music stamp to commemorate the 100th year of progress in American musical education.

Mexico has withdrawn from public sale its recent series of stamps commemorating the opening of the international highway to the United States. (Copyright, 1936, NEA Service, Inc.)

ONE SHOT THAT SANK A NAVY

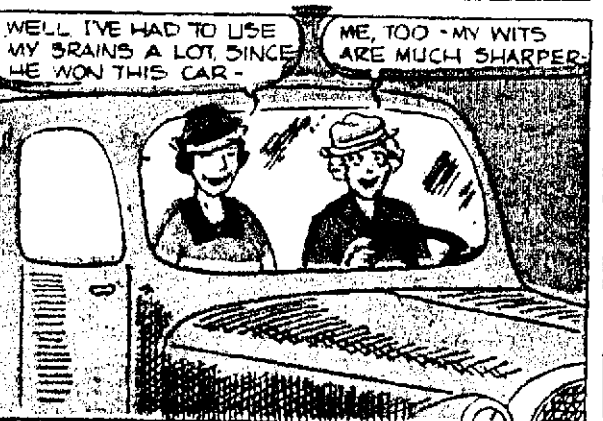

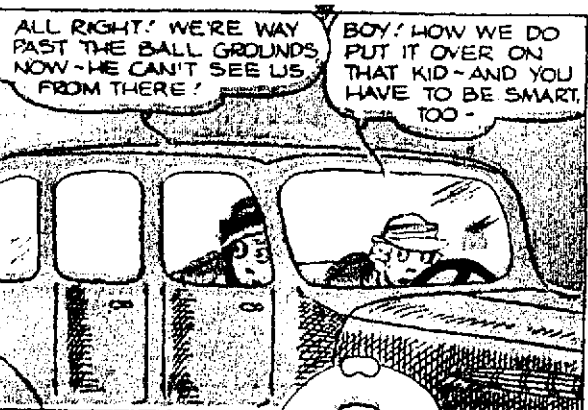

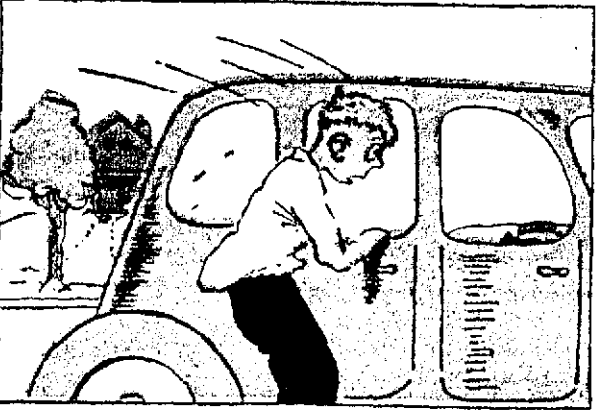

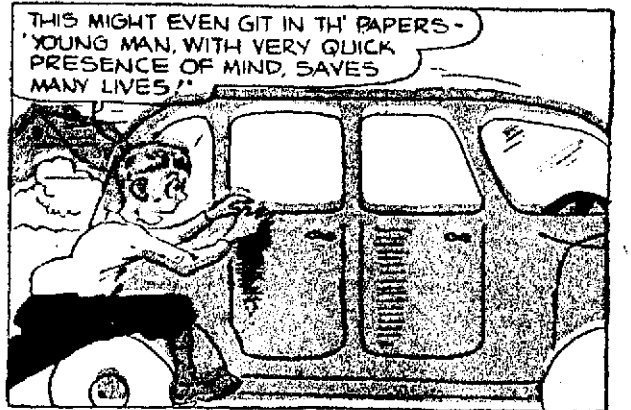

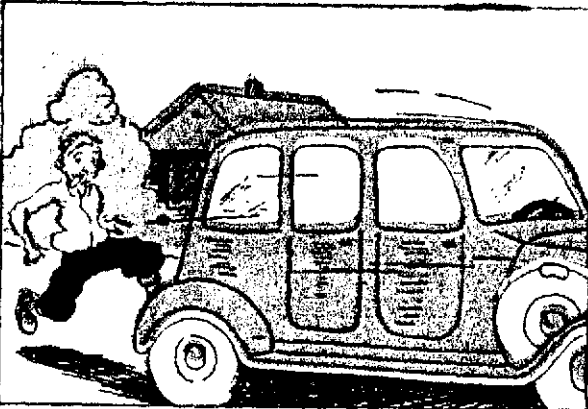

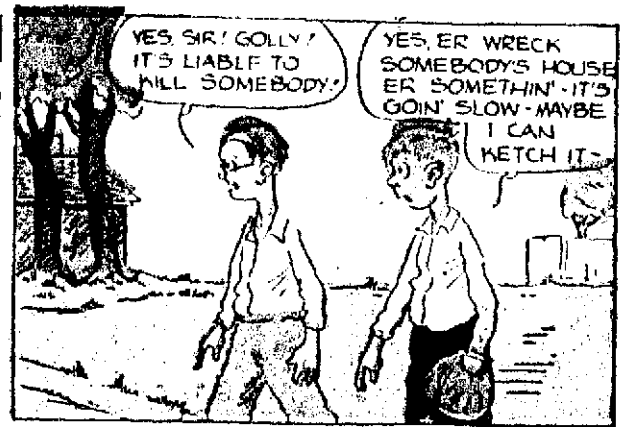

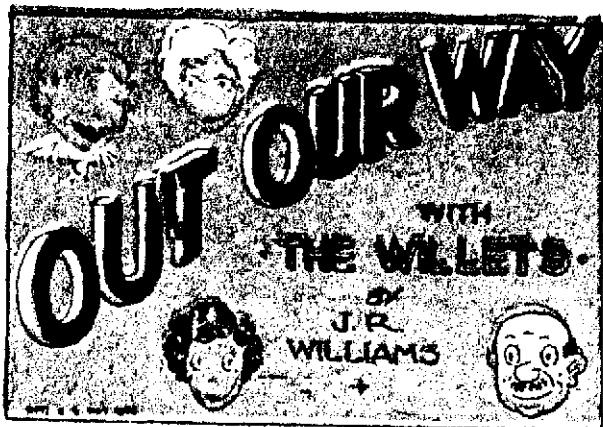

SINGLE ship in a lone "navy," a single shot from a German U-boat, and the strange navy is no more! That is the short story of the Liberian "navy"—a small vessel, really a revenue cutter, formerly the gunboat Lark, which Liberia named the President Daniel E. Howard, in honor of its chief executive.

This little Negro republic on the west coast of Africa declared war on Germany, Aug. 4, 1917. On April 9, 1918, a German submarine arrived at Monrovia, capital of Liberia, and the U-boat commander ordered city officials to cease all wireless and cable operations.

The Liberian officials refused. A short period elapsed, then a shot rang out, followed by another, and another. They came from the U-boat's gun. One shot struck the President Howard, and the vessel went down in the harbor.

Today, Liberia's "navy" is remembered on one of its stamps first issued in 1909.

THE COMIC ZOO

By Scarbo

NOW, THIS FRONTAL BUMP IS EVIDENCE THAT YOU HAVE AN AMAZING EXECUTIVE ABILITY. YOU ARE FORCEFUL, FAR-SIGHTED AND RESOURCEFUL. WITH A LITTLE ASSERTION ON YOUR PART, YOU COULD BE A CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF SOME GIANT INDUSTRIAL CORPORATION, EARNING BIG DOUGH, ONE DOLLAR, PLEASE!

HI - BIG SHOT! TAKE A SLANT AT THE FUTURE PRESIDENT OF THIS COMPANY, I'M HERE TO GET A BIG RAISE - IF YOU DON'T THINK I DESERVE IT, READ THIS CHARACTER READING BY PROFESSOR AMAZO J. GOPHERO.

AS THE TIME APPROACHES, SHE GLIDES SILENTLY TO THE NEST, PICKS UP AN EGG IN HER BEAK, AND LAYS ONE OF HER OWN IN ITS PLACE. THEN SHE FLIES AWAY AND DEVOURS THE STOLEN EGG.

THE CUCKOO EGG HATCHES QUICKLY, AND THE BABY, GROWING FASTER AND LARGER THAN ITS FOSTER NESTMATES, HOISTS THEM ON ITS BACK AND THROWS THEM BODILY OVER THE SIDE OF THE NEST.

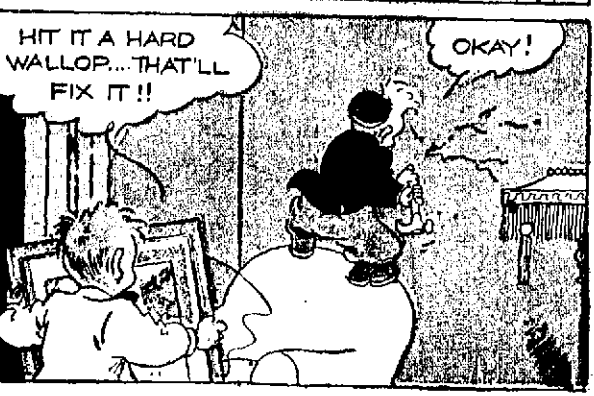

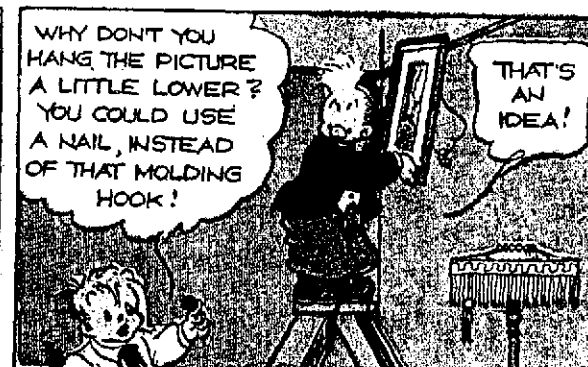

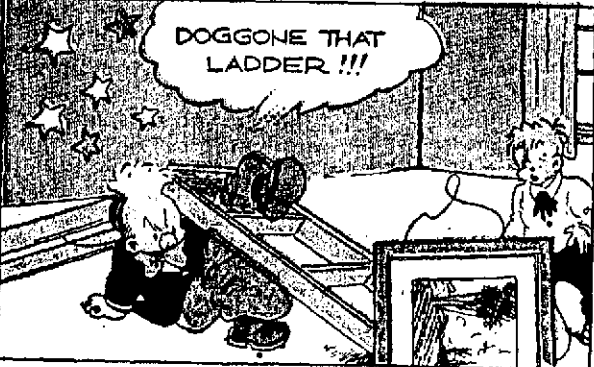

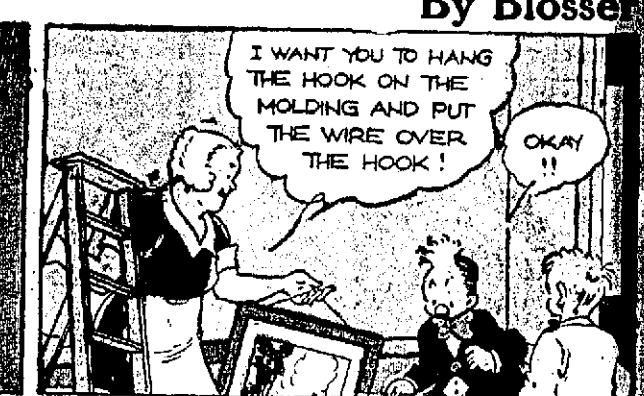

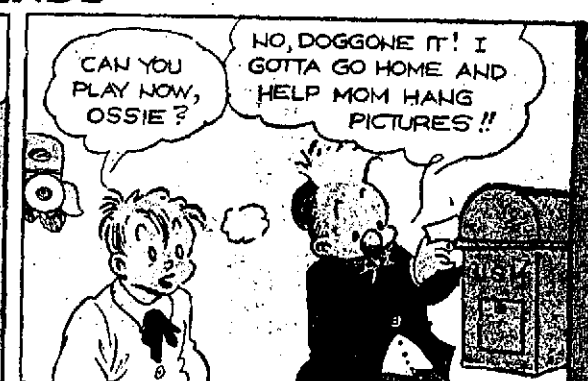

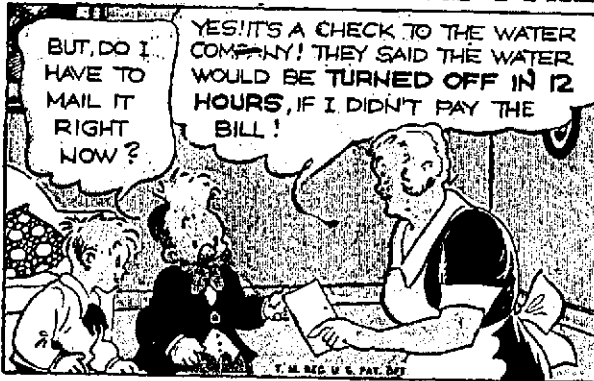

SOON THE BABY CUCKOO IS LARGER THAN ITS FOSTER PARENTS, AND ITS BULK FILLS THE NEST TO OVERFLOWING. ITS APPETITE KNOWS NO BOUNDS.

FINALLY THE PARENT VICTIMS TIRE OF THE ENDLESS TASK, AND DESERT THE HUGE YOUNGSTER, WHO NOW MUST FIND ITS OWN FOOD, FOR ITS REAL PARENTS LONG SINCE HAVE FLOWN AWAY.

ALLEY OOP LEFT DINNY TIED FAST TO A TREE AND ALONE, MARCHED OFF, SOME HUGS TO SEE, BUT, WHEN HE RETURNED, HE WAS SURPRISED, INDEED, TO FIND NO TRACE OF HIS SAURIAN STEED! NOW, LET'S TAKE A LOOK AT WHAT DINNY DID WHEN OUT IN THE JUNGLE, HE WENT AND HID.

IMPATIENT AT HIS MASTER'S DELAY, HE BREAKS HIS TETHER AND GOES ASTRAY.

ALL THRU THE JUNGLE THIS DINOSAUR PROWL'S ENTIRELY HEEDLESS OF ALL THE GROWLS -

HE BARKS AT BIRDS AND SNORTS AT A BEAR, AS ALL THRU THE FOREST, HE GOES, HERE AND THERE -

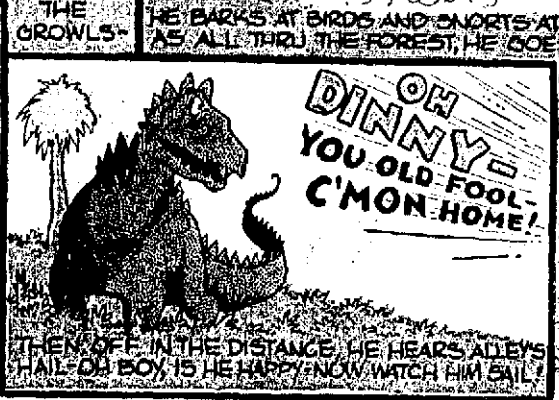

TIRING OF THIS RETURN'S HIM ABOUT AND HEADS ON BACK, DOES THIS SAURIAN LOUPE -

WHEN HE GETS BACK TO WHERE HE'D BEEN TIED, NO MASTER AWAITED: HE ALMOST DIED.

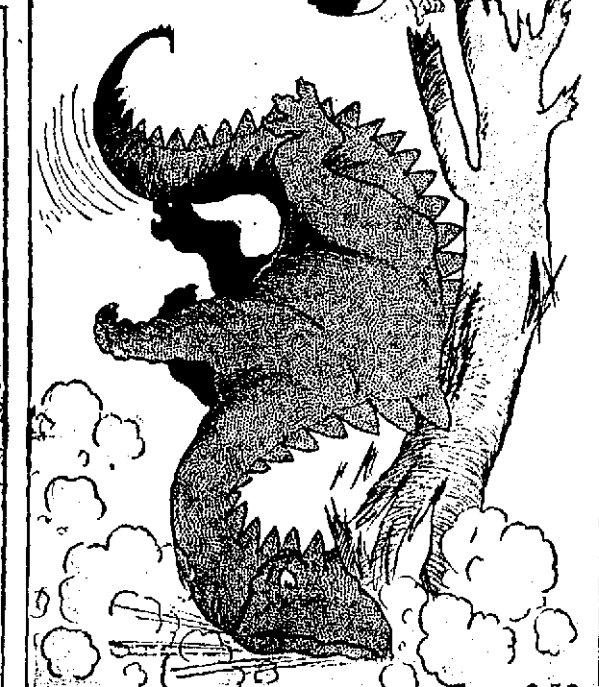

FORLORN AND DESERTED, HE GIVES WAY TO HIS FEARS, AND DOWN HIS CHEEKS ROLL GREAT BIG TEARS -

THEN OFF IN THE DISTANCE, HE HEARS ADEY'S HAIL - OH BOY, IS HE HAPPY NOW, WATCH HIM BAIL!

OVER TALL BUSHES, FALLEN TREES AND DEEP SWAMPS, THIS HAPPY-GO-LUCKY DINOSAUR ROMPS

Myra North

Special Nurse
THEY SAY

CLOSELY PURSUED ALL THE WAY, THE FLEEING CAR, CONTAINING PRINCE ADRIAN, COLONEL ZORIA AND HIS PRISONER MYRA NORTH, COMES TO A SCREECHING STOP IN FRONT OF THE ANGURAN LEGATION.

QUICK! INTO THE HOUSE AND UP ON THE ROOF!

THE ROOF? WHY...

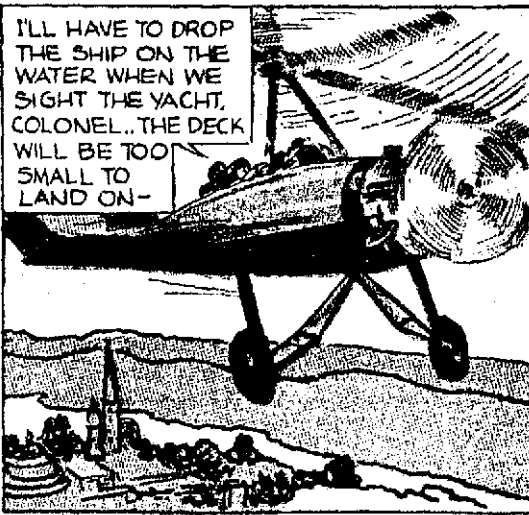

A GYRO! WELL OF ALL THINGS!

PRECISELY, MY DEAR MYRA NORTH! WE EMPIRE BUILDERS MUST BE PREPARED FOR ALL EMERGENCIES!

IN A FEW HOURS, IF ALL GOES WELL, WE SHOULD SIGHT OUR ROYAL YACHT IN THE MEDITERRANEAN... AND THEN, PERHAPS, WE CAN MAKE YOU COMFORTABLE.

GENUINELY ALARMED AT THE SUDDEN TURN OF EVENTS, MYRA DECIDES TO PLAY A WAITING GAME, UNTIL SHE CAN LEARN ZORIA'S PLOT.

I'LL HAVE TO DROP THE SHIP ON THE WATER WHEN WE SIGHT THE YACHT, COLONEL... THE DECK WILL BE TOO SMALL TO LAND ON-

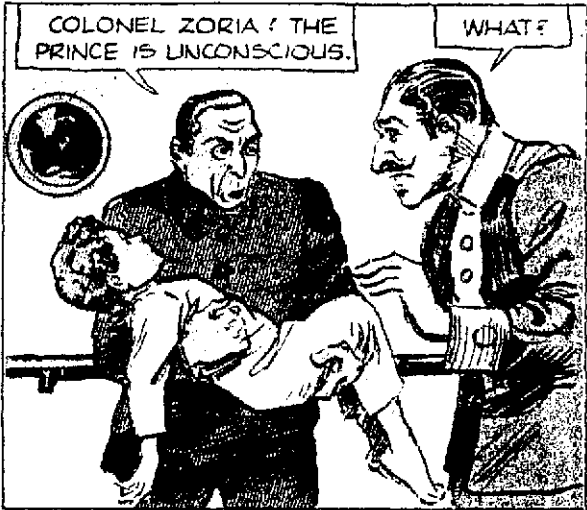

THERE IT IS, NOW, ROSAN-SIGNAL THEM, SO THEY CAN SEND OUT A LIFEBOAT!

WITHIN A FEW MOMENTS, THE WATER-SOAKED ROYAL PARTY IS TAKEN ABOARD THE YACHT WITH EVERY CEREMONY BEFITTING THE OCCASION!

HAIL, PRINCE ADRIAN!!

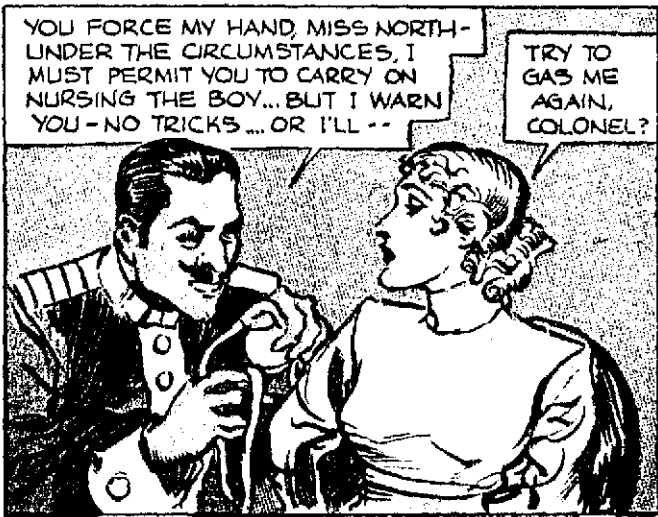

COLONEL ZORIA! THE PRINCE IS UNCONSCIOUS.

WHAT?

QUICK! UNTIE MY ARMS... THE BOY NEVER SHOULD HAVE LEFT THE HOSPITAL... HE'S IN A SERIOUS CONDITION... ALL THIS EXCITEMENT-

ENOUGH! TAKE THE PRINCE BELOW!

YOU FORCE MY HAND, MISS NORTH- UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, I MUST PERMIT YOU TO CARRY ON NURSING THE BOY... BUT I WARN YOU- NO TRICKS... OR I'LL --

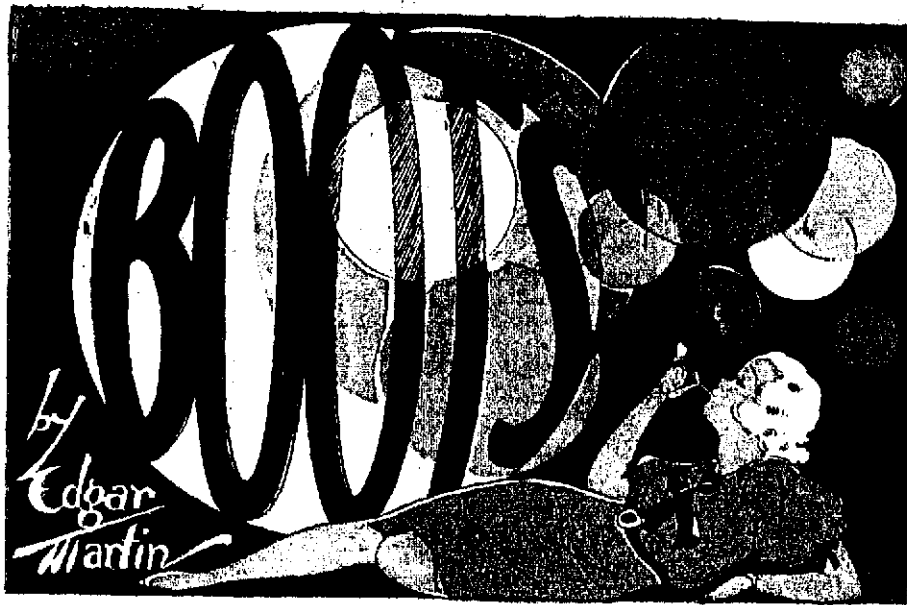

TRY TO GAS ME AGAIN, COLONEL?

POOR CURLY- YOU MAY BE A PRINCE IN YOUR OWN COUNTRY, BUT TO ME, YOU'RE JUST A PITIFUL, BEWILDERED LITTLE WAIF!

BOOTS

BOOTS! DO YOU HAVE AN EXTRA PIN THAT YOU CAN SPARE?

ONE OF THE PAPER DOLLS WAS BLOWING AROUND AND GETTING IN EVERYONE'S WAY - SO I PUT HIM IN JAIL

OH DEAR

AW, HE DOESN'T MIND! HE'S BEEN IN JAIL LOTS OF TIMES

BUT...WHAT DO YOU WANT WITH A PIN?

HE ALWAYS GETS AWAY! HE CAN SLIP THROUGH ANY CRACK - SO THIS TIME I'M GOING TO PIN HIM DOWN
